Forecast For West Midlands
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Tuesday 02 Mar 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Remaining settled and dry, but mostly cloudy.

Today:
A chilly start to the day with fog slow to clear and low cloud persisting for many. Some sunny spells with most appearing later in the afternoon. Generally, staying chilly although feeling more pleasant in any sunshine further south. Maximum temperature 8 deg C (46 deg F).

Tonight:
Clear spells for many this evening before cloud thickens overnight and further fog forms. Staying chilly with a risk of frost for prone spots, especially under clearer skies. Minimum temperature 0 deg C (32 deg F).

Wednesday:
Cloudy with outbreaks of rain south of the region spreading northwards through the day. These may turn heavy at times with perhaps the odd rumble of thunder. Chilly further north. Maximum temperature 9 deg C (48 deg F).

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
Remaining largely cloudy on Thursday with some rain at times. Turning dry with sunny spells on Friday and Saturday. Turning colder with an increased risk of frosts throughout.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.